Mr. Amory:

Noted that the Army is presently preparing a history of Korea, which if published as presently written will put CIA in a bad light in view of the fact that the historians did not have access to certain national estimates published at that time. Mr. Kirkpatrick noted that while General Smith was DCI there had been prepared complete documentary evidence which proved that CIA had pretty well called the shots in Korea, particularly at the time of the Yalu. The Director said he saw no reason why this evidence could not be made available to the Army historians and asked Messrs. Amory and Kirkpatrick to follow through on this, checking first with DD/P in order to insure that sensitive sources would not be revealed.
